Dear [REDACTED], I just saw that the event is now only open to Leiden students? I understand that is normal for Palestine related event, but I had invited a few others (non-Leiden academic/student friends for support). Is it possible to have a couple come along?

Many thank,

[REDACTED]

Dear [REDACTED]

I hope you are well. So I wanted to ask if I could shift topics for this. The truth is I have not been able to focus on my ordinary research amidst the ongoing genocide, and I would like to talk about something related to that. I have attached an image I'd like to use and a profile picture.

Here is the title and abstract:

Repression, removing fear, and the struggle to end genocide

This talk was supposed to be about my research in Lebanon about parasitic capitalism in a context of economic crisis. However, the truth is for the last 1.5 years during the genocide in Palestine I have struggled to focus on this. Instead, I want to use this opportunity to talk about the current moment to grapple with my own but also I know many others' emotional states of despair and paralysis. The Israeli state has ramped up its genocide again, murdering almost 1000 Palestinians in two weeks and implementing collective starvation. At the same time, the structures of power in the West are mobilising to ensure any dissent is crushed and people shy away from talking about and acting to prevent genocide – from kidnapping students and researchers, trying anti-genocide activists for terrorism, and stripping people of their jobs and degrees. I want to think about how we can and should confront this moment. We have an ethical obligation to not back down to push the boundaries and keep speaking and acting to end genocide and the zionist project . I want to consider how we might go about that specifically thinking about how we might remove our fear.
