Thank you, 5.1.2e

Dear all,

Last weekend 5.1.2e and I had wrote a preliminary programme that we wanted to share with you today, but this document would now confuse the process when sent separately. 5.1.2e and I will see each other this evening and we will give our input on the programme that is now proposed. My first reaction is: the structure of the programme is fine (our programme was based, too, on a schedule of 5+2+3 days), but we will propose to give more space to expert knowledge in the first two days and in the three days workshop, not in the least to give a role to our esteemed colleagues from Ghana.

Regards,

5.1.2e

Thanks 5.1.2e for sharing the updated program!

Dear All,

5.1.2e and I have continued to expand on the program and notably added to the setup of workshop 2.

Please find our thoughts attached. We are suggesting that 2 PhDs join the whole fieldschool, and that other students join for the second workshop. The site of this workshop can be one of the sites studied in the first workshop. There is one day (21st) that is still open. This can be used for digesting the activities of the first part of the fieldschool. This can then serve as a foundation for the second workshop. We need to agree on how to bring in international experts for the second workshop. What do you think?

Best

I'm sharing a proposal following our last meeting. I understand you've made progress on your side as well, based on your own discussions. My intention here is simply to offer a few ideas for consideration.

I suggest we optimize travel by grouping efforts, focusing more on consolidating days in Rabat. This would help reduce unnecessary trips and potentially schedule journeys to places like Tangier at the start or end of the week. The goal is to minimize travel fatigue while making the most of our workdays.

I'm just putting this forward for discussion

Très cordialement
