Greetings Professor Leo,

I trust this note finds you in good spirits. I wanted to reach out and express my sincere appreciation for the support you've shown me since last year's cultural expedition, and now as I am venturing into a new research project with hopefully promising prospects.

Attached to this email is the evolving draft of my research proposal, titled 5.1.2e. The idea crystallized after I had read a couple of books on identity construction dynamics, and how different sociocultural and geopolitical forces weigh in to shape Identity and define it by jamming into preconceived ideological moulds. On a side note, I can not tell if you can still remember, but our brief talk around lunch at the open air museum in Arnhem gave life to this idea, and I am eager to hear your thoughts on its direction.

I understand your schedule is hectic, but I would be incredibly grateful if you could spare a moment to share a line or two of feedback. I believe they will be instrumental in refining the proposal. I'm open to any suggestions or modifications you might have in mind. If there's a particular aspect that stands out to you or needs improvement, I'm all ears.

Warm regards,

5.1.2e
