

Advanced teacher training: Inclusive education – reaching all your students (students with autism)

This advanced training for teaching staff at Leiden University will focus on pedagogy for a diverse student population. During your teaching you will encounter a wide variety of students, all with their own history, personality and challenges. In order to enable all your students to benefit from your teaching, you will need to deal with these student differences purposefully; But how do you do that? How do you reach all your students?

During this training we will among others discuss these topics:

- Awareness of your (implicit) assumptions and associations;
- How these assumptions and associations influence your students' learning;
- How you can reach all your students;

Today's focus:

- Teaching students with autism;
- Guest speaker: Expert in the field of autism.

This midday will be open for at least 15 participants from the Faculty of Science of Leiden University. If this date will be overbooked we will provide additional dates.

Location:

Snellius Building (Exact location will be announced later)

Date & time:

Thursday November 19, 13:30 – 17:00h

Faculty (drop down menu?)

Department

Full name

e-mail